Christians call themselves adopted children of God. Our God is not a God of confusion. Creeds from Latin credo meaning "I believe" are concise doctrinal statements or confessions, usually of religious beliefs.

The church teaches that the saints "do not cease to intercede with the Father for us." He then initiated a new program with Paul, the Church, the body of Christ. Galilee was evidently prosperous, and poverty was limited enough that it did not threaten the social order. Those who uphold the doctrine look to the teaching of Paul the Apostle in Romans 5: This is how Paul repeatedly described. Indeed, even the Christian legend of Constantine's death-bed baptism involves a bishop who, in recorded history, was an Arian. How unsearchable are His judgments and unfathomable His ways!
