A couple of years ago I had the opportunity to work with a personal coach, I thought the sessions would help me define my business goals and map out a plan for success. It was an instant success and steered Louise who was 50 at the time, into a thriving, lifelong career. After conquering my first fear, which was to enter the classroom; I perched in front of the easel stiff and nearly paralyzed, staring at the sunflower we were supposed to reproduce.

Soink, particularly on my hand made paper seemed like an unlikely creative outcome. Stormy weather got in our way in June, but we lucked out in July – and instead of playing our instruments under a roof, our heads were covered by clouds and the only light was the setting sun followed by the rising of a nearly full moon. The disillusionment has been replaced with a trust in myself and life in general. I love and approve of myself. To find out more, including how to control cookies, see here:
