This jug did once, like me, love's sorrows taste, And bonds of beauty's tresses once embraced, This handle, which you see upon its side, Has many a time twined round a slender waist! No longer hug your grief and vain despair, But in this unjust world be just and fair; And since the issue of the world is naught, Think you are naught, and so shake off dull care! They who of prayer-mats make such great display Are fools to bear hypocrisy's Now of old joys naught but the name is left, Of all old friends but wine we are bereft, And that wine new, but still cleave to the cup, For save the cup, what single joy is left? Refresh and try. Yea, though she sink to hell, he'll seek her
